Justice Information Technology Integration Implementation Project

NEBRASKA

Award To: State of Nebraska

Amount: $336,200*

PURPOSE:

The State of Nebraska will use the funds to develop and implement an automated data transfer between the Automated Fingerprint Information System (AFIS) livescan and the jail management system (JAMIN) record system. Currently, most jails with AFIS equipment must enter offender information into both systems. Creating an interface between the systems will streamline the process and significantly reduce data entry errors. Nebraska will also use funds to acquire software that will standardize local case management and data sharing. This will allow a number of the state's criminal justice system components to access arrest information, citations issued, filing information, scheduling, motion, and court documents. The state will also create an Internet-based method to share criminal justice information with other states.
